"More than ever we realize how desperately the world needs the reconciling, sacrificial love taught by...Jesus Christ. Refugee men, women, and little children in Korea, India, Pakistan, and the Near East need shelter, clothes, and bread."

This is how Presbyterian Stated Clerk Eugene Carson Blake summed up the needs he saw during his world tour in 1951. When Mr. Blake traveled in Europe, India, Africa, and the Middle East, he learned how people were overwhelmed by war and poverty.

Organized by Church World Service, One Great Hour of Sharing collected millions of dollars from Presbyterian churches and other denominations. This money helped feed, clothe, and provide shelter for those who needed help.

This kind of aid demonstrates this year's theme for Heritage Sunday, "A new commandment I give to you, that you love one another" (John 13:34).

The solution for this puzzle is available on the website of the Presbyterian Historical Society at www.history.pcusa.org/cong/heritage/2004.
