Presbyterians believed that it was very important to spread the word of God to people who had never heard it. To help do this, the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America organized a group called the Standing Committee of Missions in 1802. Missionaries went west and south across the United States teaching settlers, Native Americans, and African Americans about God and the Presbyterian Church. Soon the church began to send missionaries to places such as Africa, China, India, Korea, and South America. These missionaries established schools, hospitals, and Sunday Schools in many different places. From age to age, Presbyterian mission work has touched the lives of people throughout the United States and the world.
